

LAWYER GIBSON IN A FIGHT AT KINNAN INQUEST

Mrs. Stenton's Former Attorney Hits at Wintner, New Counsel.

RETICENT AS WITNESS.

Refuses to Give Important Information On Affairs of Mrs. Kinnan.

AN ARREST IS NEAR.

Stealth Constantly Follows Counselor During Inquest Proceedings and Recess.

Lawyer Burton W. Gibson, former attorney for Mrs. Stenton and Mrs. Alice Kinnan, attempted to attack William Wintner after being on the stand at the inquest into the murder of Mrs. Kinnan at the Bronx Coroner's office this afternoon.

When the crowd was passing out of the court-room Gibson met Attorney Wintner, who was accompanied by Mrs. Stenton, and said: "Now, you liar, come out here and fight."

Wintner laughed at Gibson, and the latter struck at him and tried to push him through the door. The police had to take Gibson away.

Later Gibson returned and had an excited talk with Coroner McDonald. The Coroner and others criticized the District-Attorney for not having a legal adviser for the Coroner at a murder inquest as provided by law.

Arrest Is Expected.

Before the afternoon session was opened, the opinion was general that an arrest would be made before night, based largely on the testimony of Michael Scully, who admitted being employed by William K. Jennings, cashier of the First Department and intimate friend of Attorney Burton W. Gibson, to interview Mary Schippo, the most important witness to the murder, and who said he had suggested that she might like to visit her old home in Italy.

When Lawyer Gibson went to lunch he was followed by a detective.

Mr. Gibson, who was called away by a variety of a villain by Robert Flaherty, who preceded him as Mrs. Stenton's adviser, and who testified at the morning session, became nervous and angry this afternoon as the case dragged on. He had a wordy war with Coroner McDonald, and the latter made no effort to conceal his contempt. He said that an arrest would probably be made.

Accused Gibson of Fraud.

From Flaherty the Coroner obtained what he considered important evidence. Flaherty, under oath, accused Gibson of defrauding the estate of Mrs. Stenton out of property of pocketing $15,000 in tax reductions and of holding Mrs. Stenton and Mrs. Kinnan in confinement. Most important of Flaherty's testimony was the statement that Mrs. Kinnan had said to him in reference to Gibson:

"I know we are in the hands of a damned rascal, but as soon as my mother dies I am going after him and will make him give back the property."

According to the Coroner, that supplies a motive for killing Mrs. Kinnan. When the lunch recess was taken to-day, Attorney Gibson asked Coroner McDonald why he didn't put him on the stand.

"I'll do that when I please, and after that you will be sorry," replied.

"Is that so?"

"I don't want you to criticize this inquest."

"There were a few more but we," and a detective followed Gibson out of the room. The sleuth is keeping his eye on the lawyer.

Gibson a Witness.

Gibson was very cool when he was called to the stand this afternoon. He talked slowly, but later became excited and nervous.

He said he first became acquainted with Mrs. Stenton when she was sued, under a quack proceeding, to oust her from the old mansion. She then retained him.

"What was your fee to be?"

"That is a confidential and confidential, and I shall not answer."

"How often did you see Mrs. Kinnan and Mrs. Stenton?"

"Quite frequently."

"How did Mr. Aston come into this case?"

"Mrs. Stenton wanted him retained; further than that, the matter is confidential, and I won't say."

Here Attorney Wintner, now Mrs. Stenton's counsel, spoke up and said, as her attorney, he would waive all privileges.

"I don't know that this man has a power of attorney," said Gibson.

"Oh, yes, you do," said Mr. Wintner. "You saw it."

But the Coroner could not get Gibson to answer, and amid a war of words between Gibson and Wintner, the case was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

Gibson is likely to be on the stand all day to-morrow.

HARVARD MAN'S CRUSADE STOPS GAMBLING IN SIAM.
WASHINGTON, July 16.—Under the leadership of its General Counselor, Prof. W. H. Strobel, formerly of the Harvard Law School, the Government of Siam has made a systematic crusade against gambling, which has long notoriously flourished in the kingdom. Following decisions in the past to abolish all gambling places outside of Bangkok, the 18th Book of Foreign Relations, just issued by the Siam Government, says Siam proposes to abolish on April 1 next all such places in Bangkok if the Christian nations assent to a readjustment of Siam's tariff for revenue.

FANEUIL HALL IN PERIL FROM FLAMES.
BOSTON, July 16.—Historic Faneuil Hall and the market district were seriously threatened by fire which started shortly before 7 o'clock this morning in a six-story building at Nos. 2 and 4 South Market street, not more than sixty feet distant from the "Cradle of Liberty." Great masses of water were constantly poured upon the burning building and it was not even scorched by the flames, which, however, ruined the structure in which they broke out and spread slightly to adjoining buildings. These included the places at No. 28 Merchants' row and to the South Market street, the former occupied by the Hucker's Reeper Company, the General Express Company and the Fred Sears Meat Company, while the latter was occupied by Cook, Lister & York, grocers. The loss was $50,000.

SANITATION FATAL TO PANAMA LABORERS.
WASHINGTON, July 16.—Perfect sanitation and cleanliness are proving fatal to the West Indian negroes employed on the Panama Canal. criminal insane without a trial. A trial would mean a public parading of the private lives of Stanford White and his friends, and of the private lives of Harry Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit Thaw and their friends. The Thaws don't want such a thing to happen. Neither do the Whites.

There is a report that the District Attorney, believing Thaw to be a madman, had about made up his mind the appointment of a lunacy commission was a proper step when, on Saturday, Thaw himself upset all calculations by announcing that he had retained his old chum, Clifford W. Hartidge, to handle his defense and had dropped the firm headed by ex-Judge Olcott and former Gov. Black.

Prisoner Stands Pat.
This afternoon the situation is just this: Harry Thaw stands pat in his rejection of the counsel of Olcott and McManus. Clifford W. Hartidge stands pat, too. He insists that Thaw, being of age and a free-born American citizen, has the right to choose his own lawyers and order his own course of action. The Thaw family are a unit in their decision that the insanity plea is the proper one.

After spending an hour at the Tombs Mrs. William Thaw drove direct to the "Lorraine" to-morrow afternoon. At 1 P. M. Delaford's office, she will take part in a conference with ex-Judge Olcott, her son, Josiah C. Thaw, her daughter, Mrs. George Carnegie, and Louis L.
